The first plaintiff suffered brain damage during his birth and he had been and would remain completely dependent on carers throughout his life for all aspects of daily living. The second and third plaintiffs were the mother and father of the first plaintiff. A medical negligence suit was filed by the plaintiffs wherein liability was found against the defendants and damages were ordered to be assessed. The Deputy Registrar ('DR'), upon assessment of damages, awarded RM2,005,248.24 in damages and RM100,000 as costs together with the interest at the rate of 4% per annum on both general and special damages. The plaintiffs' appeal against the DR's decision was dismissed by the High Court Judge ('HCJ') save for increasing the amount of the medical expenses and increasing the post-judgment interest to 8% per annum. The first plaintiff, therefore appealed against the quantum which was confined to the following: (i) that a 'one-third practice' and the case of Sathisvaran Chandrasegaran v. Agilan Vanmugelan & Anor ('Sathisvaran') were wrongly applied in respect of various items of damages; (ii) the plaintiff should be awarded damages for the cost of future living expenses after he attained the age of 18 years; (iii) that the plaintiff should be awarded damages for future pain and suffering arising out of future surgery; (iv) that the plaintiff should be awarded damages for the cost of future respite care; and (v) that the plaintiff should be awarded damages for the additional costs of holidays. The two claims for special damages that were the subject of the one-third rule were (i) the plaintiff's hospitalisation and clinic expenses paid by the plaintiff's father's employer, Maybank, in the sum of RM17,121.06; and (ii) a further sum of RM4,940.37 which was paid by the plaintiff's parents for out-patient treatment. The DR disallowed the sum of RM17,121.06

relying on the case of Sathisvaran and a blanket one-third rule was applied to award only one-third of the expenses paid by the parents. On appeal, the HCJ allowed the sum paid by Maybank but applied the one-third rule. The plaintiff further submitted the DR erred in making a two-third deduction instead of one-third from the total sum awarded for the use of a disabled-friendly vehicle. It was also submitted that the award should be made for two vehicles.

Held (allowing appeal in part)
Per Harmindar Singh Dhaliwal JCA delivering the judgment of the court:

(1) The 'one-third rule' is where medical costs and expenses incurred in a private hospital claimed by the plaintiff would not be allowed in full if it could be shown that such treatment was available at government hospitals. A claim instituted for medical expenses could not be denied purely on the ground that the particular treatment was available at a government hospital. The test of reasonableness should be applied in deciding whether the plaintiff was entitled to recover the full sum of the private healthcare medical expenses wherein the plaintiff must justify why he chose treatment at a private hospital over a public hospital and the plaintiff must show that the costs of treatment at a private hospital was reasonable. (paras 9, 10, 12 & 15)

(2) There was no sufficient reason to show that it was justified and reasonable for the plaintiff to be awarded the full sum of treatment expenses at the private hospital. There was evidence that the treatment required and the expertise needed was available at government hospitals. It could not be the case that the government or public hospitals were unable to deal with cerebral palsy patients. Further, the excuse that the parents were working during office hours applied to almost everyone these days. Hence, the decision that the plaintiff was not entitled to the full costs of a private hospital was affirmed and the HCJ was right in allowing the medical expenses paid by Maybank. (paras 19-21)

(3) The DR allowed the monthly costs of hiring a maid at RM1,100 and awarded a sum of RM264,000 for the multiplier of 20 years based on life expectancy of 35 years. The plaintiff contended that an additional sum of RM700 ought to have been awarded for the maid's living expenses. Considering that the sum awarded was sufficient compensation, the sum was affirmed. (para 22)

(4) It would be more realistic and reasonable for the purchase of two disabled-friendly vehicles over the 20 year period taking into account the normal life-span of such vehicle. The total sum for two purchases of the Renault Kangoo, which was agreed as the suitable vehicle, would be RM280,000, to be deducted only by one-third taking into account the use by other family members. There should not be any additional sum to the RM50,000 awarded for petrol and maintenance for 20 years as the costs must also be contributed by the family members since they would also have use of the said vehicle. Hence, the awards made by the courts below was set aside and the sum of RM236,666 awarded under this claim. (para 25)

(5) There was no justification to interfere in the decision of the HCJ rejecting the claim for pain and suffering for future surgery. Further, the claim for future respite care had also been rightly rejected by the courts below. As for the additional costs of holidays, but for the disability, the plaintiff would have been able to travel on holidays unassisted when he reached adulthood. Therefore, an award in the sum of RM1,000 for the multiplier period of 20 years was allowed. The award on costs was held to be appropriate since the proceedings concerned the issue of quantum only. (paras 27, 30 & 31)

Bahasa Malaysia Headnotes

Plaintif pertama mengalami kecederaan otak semasa dilahirkan dan dia kini dan akan kekal bergantung pada penjaga sepanjang hayatnya dalam kesemua aspek kehidupan hariannya. Plaintif kedua dan ketiga adalah ibu dan bapa plaintif pertama. Satu guaman kecuaian perubatan difailkan oleh plaintif dan liabiliti dipertanggungkan terhadap defendan-defendan dan pentaksiran ganti rugi diarahkan. Timbalan Pendaftar ('TP'), selepas pentaksiran ganti rugi, mengawardkan RM2,005,248.24 sebagai ganti rugi dan RM100,000 sebagai kos bersama-sama dengan faedah pada kadar 4% setahun untuk ganti rugi am dan ganti rugi khas. Rayuan plaintif-plaintif terhadap keputusan TP ditolak oleh Hakim Mahkamah Tinggi ('HMT') kecuali jumlah perbelanjaan perubatan yang dinaikkan dan faedah selepas penghakiman dinaikkan menjadi 8% setahun. Oleh itu, plaintif pertama merayu terhadap kuantum yang terhad seperti berikut: (i) 'amalan satu pertiga' dan kes Sathisvaran Chandrasegaran v. Agilan Vanmugelan & Anor ('Sathisvaran') diguna pakai secara salah berkaitan berbagai item ganti rugi; (ii) plaintif sepatutya diawardkan ganti rugi untuk kos perbelanjaan masa akan datang selepas dia mencapai umur 18 tahun; (iii) plaintif sepatutnya diawardkan ganti rugi untuk kesakitan dan penderitaan masa akan datang yang timbul daripada pembedahan masa akan datang; (iv) plaintif sepatutnya diawardkan ganti rugi untuk kos jagaan respit masa akan datang; dan (v) plaintif sepatutnya diawardkan ganti rugi untuk kos tambahan percutian. Dua tuntutan ganti rugi khas yang menjadi perkara kaedah satu pertiga adalah: (i) kemasukan plaintif ke hospital dan perbelanjaan klinik yang dibayar oleh majikan bapa plaintif, Maybank, sejumlah RM17,121.06; dan (ii) jumlah RM4,940.37 yang dibayar oleh ibu bapa plaintif untuk rawatan pesakit luar. Kedua-dua tuntutan untuk ganti rugi khas. Timbalan Pendaftar tidak membenarkan jumlah RM17,121.06 bersandarkan pada kes Sathisvaran dan kaedah satu pertiga diguna pakai secara menyeluruh untuk mengawardkan hanya satu pertiga perbelanjaan yang dikeluarkan oleh ibu bapanya. Atas rayuan, HMT membenarkan jumlah yang dibayar Maybank tetapi mengguna pakai kaedah satu pertiga. Plaintif selanjutnya menghujahkan bahawa TP khilaf apabila membuat potongan dua pertiga dan bukan satu pertiga daripada jumlah keseluruhan yang diawardkan untuk kenderaan mesra pengguna kurang upaya. Dihujahkan juga bahawa award tersebut perlu diberi untuk dua buah kenderaan.

Diputuskan (membenarkan sebahagian rayuan)
Oleh Harmindar Singh Dhaliwal HMR menyampaikan penghakiman mahkamah:

(1) Kaedah satu pertiga ialah kos perubatan dan perbelanjaan di hospital swasta yang dituntut plaintif tidak akan dibenarkan sepenuhnya jika boleh ditunjukkan rawatan sedemikian boleh didapati di hospital-hospital kerajaan. Tuntutan untuk perbelanjaan perubatan tidak boleh dinafikan semata-mata atas alasan bahawa rawatan tertentu boleh didapati di hospital kerajaan. Ujian kemunasabahan wajar dipakai dalam menentukan sama ada penuntut berhak mendapatkan semula jumlah penuh perbelanjaan perubatan di hospital swasta dan plaintif perlu menjustifikasi mengapa dia memilih rawatan di hospital swasta dan bukan hospital kerajaan dan plaintif mesti menunjukkan bahawa kos rawatan di hospital swasta tersebut munasabah.

(2) Tiada alasan yang mencukupi untuk menunjukkan award jumlah penuh untuk perbelanjaan rawatan di hospital tersebut kepada plaintif adalah adil dan munasabah. Keterangan menunjukkan rawatan yang diperlukan dan keperluan pakar terdapat di hospital kerajaan. Hospital kerajaan atau hospital awam tidak mungkin tiada upaya merawat pesakit palsi serebrum. Malahan, alasan ibu bapa plaintif bekerja pada waktu pejabat digunakan oleh semua orang pada masa kini. Oleh itu, keputusan bahawa plaintif tidak berhak mendapat kos penuh hospital swasta disahkan dan HMT betul apabila membenarkan perbelanjaan perubatan yang dibayar Maybank.

(3) Timbalan Pendaftar membenarkan kos bulanan mengupah pembantu rumah pada harga RM1,100 dan mengawardkan jumlah RM264,000 dengan pendarab 20 tahun berdasarkan jangka hayat 35 tahun. Plaintif menghujahkan bahawa jumlah tambahan RM700 perlu diawardkan untuk perbelanjaan hidup pembantu rumah. Mempertimbangkan bahawa jumlah yang diawardkan adalah pampasan yang mencukupi, jumlah itu disahkan.

(4) Menjadi lebih realistik dan munasabah untuk membeli dua buah kenderaan mesra orang kurang upaya untuk tempoh 20 tahun mengambil kira jangka hayat biasa kenderaan sedemikian. Jumlah keseluruhan untuk pembelian dua buah kenderaan Renault Kangoo, yang dipersetujui kenderaan yang sesuai, ialah RM280,000, dan satu pertiga ditolak mengambil kira penggunaannya oleh ahli-ahli keluarga yang lain. Tiada jumlah tambahan pada RM50,000 yang diawardkan untuk petrol dan penyenggaraan selama 20 tahun kerana kos itu perlu disumbangkan oleh ahli keluarga kerana mereka juga akan menggunakan kenderaan itu. Oleh itu, award yang diberi mahkamah-mahkamah di bawah diketepikan dan jumlah RM236,666 diawardkan bawah tuntutan ini.

(5) Tiada justifikasi untuk campur tangan dengan keputusan HMT menolak tuntutan kesakitan dan penderitaan untuk pembedahan masa akan datang. Selanjutnya, tuntutan untuk jagaan respit masa akan datang ditolak sewajarnya oleh mahkamah-mahkamah di bawah. Berkaitan dengan kos tambahan percutian, jika bukan kerana kecacatan, plaintif akan berupaya melancong tanpa bantuan apabila dewasa. Oleh itu, award berjumlah RM1,000 dengan pendarab 20 tahun dibenarkan. Award untuk kos diputuskan wajar kerana prosiding ini berkaitan dengan isu kuantum sahaja.

JUDGMENT

Harmindar Singh Dhaliwal JCA:

[1] This is an appeal arising out of a decision by the High Court at Johor Bahru given on 2 March 2017. The plaintiffs in the High Court had filed a suit alleging medical negligence on the part of the defendants. On 30 November 2010, the High Court found liability against the defendants and ordered damages to be assessed by the Deputy Registrar of the High Court ("DR").

[2] The assessment was undertaken by the learned DR who made awards of RM2,005,248.24 in damages and RM100,000 as costs together with interest at the rate of 4% per annum on both general and special damages.

Against this decision, the plaintiffs appealed to the High Court Judge. On 2 March 2017, the learned judge dismissed the plaintiffs' appeal save for increasing the amount of the medical expenses to RM7,353.81 and increasing the post-judgment interest to 8% per annum.

[3] The first plaintiff and the defendants appealed against the order of the High Court Judge. The appeal by the defendants was discontinued prior to the hearing of this appeal. This appeal is therefore an appeal by the first plaintiff against quantum only.

[4] The appeal was heard on 11 April 2018 and adjourned to a date for decision. This is now our decision. For convenience, the parties will be referred to as they were in the High Court. This appeal is by the first plaintiff through his father and for convenience will be referred to, for the most part, as the appeal by the plaintiff.

Brief Background

[5] The first plaintiff, Muhammad Yassien bin Zuliskandar, suffered brain damage during his birth on 8 October 2007 at Hospital Sultanah Aminah, Johor Bahru. In medical terms, his case was diagnosed as severe spastic quadriplegia cerebral palsy with cognitive motor, speech and vision impairments. He has been and will remain completely dependent on carers throughout his life for all aspects of daily living. The second and third plaintiffs are the mother and father respectively of the first plaintiff.

[6] A medical negligence suit was filed by the plaintiffs in 2008. After a lengthy trial, liability was pronounced against the defendants with damages to be assessed. An appeal against liability was initially filed by the defendants but later withdrawn. An assessment of damages was then undertaken by the learned DR from 18 July 2013 to 21 May 2014 and awards were made as mentioned earlier. On appeal, the learned judge on 2 March 2017 dismissed the plaintiffs' appeal save for the matters stated earlier.

The Appeal

[7] Before us, the plaintiff's appeal was confined to the following matters:

(i) that a "one-third practice" and the case of Sathisvaran Chandrasegaran v. Agilan Vanmugelan & Anor [2012] 3 CLJ 450; [2012] 4 MLJ 548 ("Sathisvaran") were wrongly applied in respect of various items of damages;

(ii) that the plaintiff should be awarded damages for the cost of future living expenses after he attains the age of 18 years;

(iii) that the plaintiff should be awarded damages for future pain and suffering arising out of future surgery;

(iv) that the plaintiff should be awarded damages for the cost of future respite care; and

(v) that the plaintiff should be awarded damages for the additional cost of holidays.

Our Decision

[8] In respect of the claims which are the subject-matter of this appeal, it may be convenient to set out in tabular form the claims allowed by the learned DR and the learned judge as well as the claims being sought in this appeal. For this purpose, table A is set out at the end of this judgment. Table A also sets out the claims allowed by us. We now deal with the issues or claims as canvassed by the parties as follows.

Application Of The "One-Third Rule"

[9] This issue concerns the application of the so-called "one-third rule" whereby medical costs and expenses incurred in a private hospital claimed by plaintiff would not be allowed in full if it can be shown that such treatment was available at government hospitals. In this context, it was submitted by the plaintiff that the learned DR has misunderstood the decisions of this court in Chai Yee Chong v. Lew Thai [2004] 2 CLJ 321; [2004] 2 MLJ 465 ("Chai Yee Chong") and Gleneagles Hospital (KL) Sdn Bhd v. Chung Chu Yin & Ors And Another Appeal [2013] 8 CLJ 449; [2013] 4 MLJ 785 ("Gleneagles Hospital") to mean that a claimant can recover only one-third of the cost of private healthcare medical expenses.

[10] In this regard, we agree that in Chai Yee Chong, no such "one-third principle" was set out. Indeed, as was pointed out in the case itself, no such principle is provided under any written law. It has only become a matter of practice through the adoption of case precedents. Instead, it was decided that the test of reasonableness should be applied in deciding whether the claimant is entitled to recover the full sum of the private healthcare medical expenses.

[11] This test of reasonableness was recently affirmed by the Federal Court in Inas Faiqah Mohd Helmi (A Child Suing Through Her Father And Next Friend; Mohd Helmi Abdul Aziz) v. Kerajaan Malaysia & Ors [2016] 2 CLJ 885; [2016] 2 MLJ 1 ("Inas Faiqah") where Abdull Hamid Embong FCJ, in speaking for the court, observed as follows (at pp. 898-899 (CLJ); p. 15 (MLJ)):

> [36] In this respect, we are in agreement with the contention of the appellant that the case of Chai Yee Chong is not relevant to the present case. We respectfully say that the Court of Appeal had erred in coming to its conclusion that the award made by the learned trial judges was in line with the current practice on the strength of the decision in Chai Yee Chong, which is a case concerning a claim for past private medical treatment. In determining a claim for future medical treatment, be it at private, or at a public hospital, the question of reasonableness in making such a claim should always be the paramount consideration. The plaintiff not only needs to justify, for instance, why he chooses treatment at a private hospital over a public one, but he must also show that the amount claimed for such treatment is reasonable. Of course this can be satisfied by the production of compelling evidence for that purpose. It is to be noted that in claiming for the cost of future damage in Gleneagles, evidence was led as to the cost of rehabilitation care of the first respondent and the costing was obtained from the private hospitals/centres.

[12] In other words, the test of reasonableness applies in two ways. First, the plaintiff must justify why he chooses treatment at a private hospital over a public hospital. Secondly, the plaintiff must show that the cost of treatment at a private hospital was reasonable. In determining whether it is, or was, reasonable or justifiable in resorting to treatment at a private hospital, there can be no fixed or inflexible rules simply because of the myriad of reasons or circumstances why treatment is sought or intended to be sought at a private hospital.

[13] For instance, a plaintiff, immediately after an accident, may be brought by a Good Samaritan to the nearest private hospital in the interest of getting quick and early treatment. It may then be unjust to expect the plaintiff to justify why his claims at the private hospital ought to be allowed.

[14] There may also be a case where a plaintiff is seriously injured and his only concern is to seek quick and effective treatment which he or she thinks is available at the private hospital only. At that moment, the plaintiff is hardly in a position to undertake a cost-benefit analysis of any potential claim against possible tortfeasors. In those circumstances, it may be reasonable to allow such claims.

[15] In the end, there can be no fixed rule. It really depends on the peculiar circumstances of each case. With the Inas Faiqah decision, a claim instituted now for medical expenses cannot be denied purely on the ground that the particular treatment was available at a government hospital. A holistic consideration of the question of reasonableness is imperative before any decision can be made on whether such claims for private medical expenses can be allowed (see also Rohgetana Mayathevan v. Dr Navin Kumar & Ors And Other Appeals [2017] 3 CLJ 311; [2017] 4 MLJ 102).

[16] Reverting to the instant appeal, there are two claims as special damages which were the subject of the one-third rule. The first was the plaintiff's hospitalisation and clinic expenses paid by the plaintiff's father's employer, Maybank, in the sum of RM17,121.06 and a further sum of RM4,940.37 which was paid by the plaintiff's parents for out-patient treatment. The learned DR disallowed the sum of RM17,121.06 by relying on the decision in Sathisvaran. A blanket one-third rule was then applied to award only one-third of the expenses paid by the parents.

[17] On appeal, the learned judge allowed the sum paid by Maybank but applied the one-third rule. However, both the learned DR and the learned judge did not provide any reasons for doing so apart from saying that it was unreasonable for the plaintiff to seek treatment at a private hospital instead of a public hospital.

[18] In coming to this view, it was submitted by learned counsel for the plaintiff that both the learned DR and the learned judge failed to take into account the unchallenged evidence which justified the plaintiff's parents seeking private medical care and treatment. It was firstly asserted that the plaintiff received negligent treatment in the defendants' public hospital which led him to suffer the irreversible brain damage. Secondly, it was not disputed that there were insufficient resources in public hospitals to cater for the plaintiff's specific care and rehabilitation needs, resulting in long waits, infrequent appointments and lack of continuity in treatment. Thirdly, the plaintiff's parents were unable to take him to public hospitals as they were both working. The rehabilitation appointments in public hospitals were given only for weekdays and during office hours. In the circumstances, it was submitted that the plaintiff should be awarded the full sums incurred under this head.

[19] After careful consideration, we do not think that sufficient reasons have been given to show that it was justified and reasonable for the plaintiff to be awarded the full sum of treatment expenses at the private hospital. There was evidence that the treatment required and the expertise needed is available at government hospitals. It cannot be the case that government or public hospitals are unable to deal with cerebral palsy patients. The excuse that the parents are working during office hours applies to almost everyone these days.

[20] In our assessment, the courts below were entitled to hold that the plaintiff was not entitled to the full costs of a private hospital. We are not persuaded that we should interfere with the awards made by the learned judge for past as well as future medical care and treatment. Those awards are therefore affirmed.

[21] We should also add that the learned judge was right in allowing the medical expenses paid by the employer, Maybank. With the Federal Court decision in Dr Kok Choong Seng & Anor v. Soo Cheng Lin & Another Appeal [2017] 10 CLJ 529, medical expenses paid by an insurer or employer or a benevolent third party are recoverable as damages by the claimant. In this context, the Federal Court followed the Supreme Court decision in Frank Astle Ward v. Malaysian Airlines System Bhd [1991] 3 CLJ 2053; [1991] 1 CLJ (Rep) 117; [1991] 3 MLJ 317 instead of the case of Sathisvaran. The Federal Court noted that Sathisvaran was decided without the benefit of full argument and the extensive authorities made available to the Federal Court.

Claim For Maid's Living Expenses

[22] The learned DR had allowed the monthly cost of hiring a maid at RM1,100 and awarded a sum of RM264,000 for the multiplier of 20 years. The multiplier was not disputed and it was based on life expectancy of 35 years. The plaintiff contends that an additional sum of RM700 ought to have been awarded for the maid's living expenses which would include the maid's accommodation, food and other consumables. In this regard, the maid hired will have to reside and live in the same dwelling as the plaintiff. We therefore consider the sum awarded as sufficient compensation. The sum awarded below is therefore affirmed.

Claim For Disabled-Friendly Vehicle

[23] There was no dispute that the plaintiff needed the use of a disabled-friendly vehicle. The learned DR had allowed only one purchase of such a vehicle at a price of RM120,000. A sum of RM20,000 was deducted to take into account the trade-in value of the existing vehicle. From the remaining sum of RM100,000, a further two-third deduction was made to cater for the incidental use of the said vehicle by family members. The amount awarded came to RM35,000.

[24] To this sum, an award of RM50,000 was allowed for petrol and vehicle maintenance and another RM20,000 for vehicle modification. The total then came to RM105,500. It was submitted that the learned DR had erred in making a two-third deduction instead of one-third which was more reasonable. It was further submitted that the award should be made for two vehicles as it would be unreasonable for one vehicle to be used for 20 years.

[25] In our considered view, there is merit in the plaintiff's submission. It would be more realistic and reasonable for the purchase of two disabled-friendly vehicles over the 20-year period taking into account the normal life-span of such a vehicle. The parties had agreed that a suitable vehicle was the Renault Kangoo which costs RM140,000 after the necessary modifications. The total sum for two purchases, which comes to RM280,000, should be deducted by only one-third to take into account use by other family members. The total after such deduction comes to RM186,666. We do not think any additional sum should be added to the RM50,000 awarded for petrol and maintenance for 20 years as such costs must also be contributed by the family members since they would also have used of the said vehicle. We, therefore, set aside the awards made by the courts below and allow the sum of RM236,666 under this claim.

Pain And Suffering From Future Surgery

[26] The learned DR and the learned judge had allowed the sum of RM25,000 for the cost of future surgery. The plaintiff claimed that a further sum of RM30,000 ought to have been allowed for pain and suffering arising out of future surgery. Learned counsel for the plaintiff cited several cases to support his proposition.

[27] The learned judge had agreed that this claim for pain and suffering for future surgery should be rejected following the case of Inas Faiqah. In Inas Faiqah, the Federal Court had disallowed the claim as the sum of RM350,000 awarded in that case for pain and suffering was for the whole period including future pain and suffering. For the same reason, we see no justification to interfere in the decision of the court below.

Claim For Respite Care, Living Expenses After 18 Years And Additional Cost Of Holidays

[28] It was submitted that the plaintiff will need respite care so as to allow his carers to get a rest from the stress and strain of taking care of him. It was contended that such rest for the caregivers would be beneficial to the plaintiff. Learned counsel for the plaintiff cited several cases where this claim was allowed.

[29] Even so, we note that the Federal Court in Inas Faiqah had disallowed this claim on the basis that respite care could be best left to close family members. The claim for living expenses after the age of 18 years was also rejected by the Federal Court on the ground that a sufficient award had been made for the plaintiff's future need for accommodation, utilities and clothes and there was no necessity for a further award. The claim for cost of holidays was also disallowed as this cost would have been incurred in any event by the plaintiff's family. The circumstances prevailing in the instant appeal are the same and we therefore find that these claims were rightly rejected by the courts below.

[30] On the question of cost of holidays, however, there was a further claim that an additional cost would be incurred when the plaintiff goes for holidays. He will need to be accompanied by his parents and the maid. We see merit in this claim. But for the disability, the plaintiff would have been able to travel on holidays unassisted when he reaches adulthood. We accept that an additional cost will be incurred when he goes for holidays. We would therefore award a sum of RM1,000 for the multiplier period of 20 years. The total allowed comes to RM20,000.

[31] Finally, there is also an appeal on the costs awarded. The learned DR awarded costs in the sum of RM100,000. It was submitted that going by the trend of awards, the award should be increased to RM173,221.30 after taking into account the out-of-pocket expenses of RM23,221.30. After due consideration, we do not think the award on costs is inappropriate since the proceedings concerned the issue of quantum only. We, therefore, find no merit on this score.

Conclusion

[32] In the circumstances, and for the reasons we have just provided, we allow the appeal in part in the matters and amounts as stated and summarised in the following Table A. As agreed, there will be no order as to costs. Deposit to be refunded.
